*AK = Acceptable Knowledge. AK is a waste characterization method used in lieu of sampling and analyses, indicating that the waste generator is able to characterize the waste based on knowledge of the waste genesis, any potential contamination from other sources, or any other possible contribution to the waste stream. If AK is selected as a waste characterization method, the certification statement below acknowledges this definition and use of AK.

Upon receipt of a Special Discharge Request, the Division will review the submission and will determine if the wastewater can be discharged to the sanitary sewer. SPR Pretreatment Division may grant or deny the Special Discharge Request. Discharging any wastewater (other than domestic) to the sanitary sewer without prior written permission from the Pretreatment Division is prohibited. If it is determined that a batch of wastewater cannot be discharged to the sanitary sewer, you are required to find an alternative disposal or management method for this wastewater.
